THERE MAY BE NO CHOICE

Ex-Mayor Lang Claims There Is No
Way to Keep Out of Second Class.

The Council Must Report to Legislature, or Repeal Ordinance—Citizens
Could Then Act.

COMPARISON OF CHARTER PROVISIONS

Former Mayor James M. Lang, who once opposed the move to place Paducah in cities of the second class, because he thought it would cause confusion during his administration, and badly impair it, but who is now in favor of the change, declares that there is no way the city can be prevented from entering the second class.

The legislature is compelled to place a city in a certain class when its population reaches a certain figure, and this population may be submitted to the legislature either from the federal census, or from a census authorized by and certified to by the city. When the legislature is apprised of a city's population, according to the ex-mayor, the legislature is compelled by an imperative provision of the statute to place the city in the class to which it belongs.

Several months ago the city council authorized a census, and the census showed that there are over 30,000 people here. The report was adopted, and became a part of the official records, and the mayor, city attorney, and council was directed by ordinance to present this to the legislature, together with other necessary papers, when it meets in January. This ordinance is a city law, which has to be enforced if the officials comply with their oath of office. The only way to escape enforcing its provisions is to repeal it, and that portion relative to the official report of the census takers cannot be repealed; hence any citizen can obtain a copy of the report, adopted and concurred in by the council, and present it to the legislature, and the legislature will then have to transfer the city to the second class, so thinks Mr. Lang.

According to this position, the only possible way to keep Paducah out of the second class would be by taking a new census which would not show twenty thousand people.

Yesterday The Sun gave some figures comparing the government under the second and third class. Today it has some more, and they will doubtless prove of interest.

In second class cities the office of tax collector is abolished, and the duties and salary go to the treasurer. This would effect no change, as it would merely transfer one salary from one officer to another.

The levy for school purposes under the second class cannot exceed 35 cents, while under the present charter it can be as much as fifty cents, and was fifty cents until the present year. It is estimated that $10,000 could be saved on schools.

The city treasurer becomes treasurer of the school board without extra pay, saving the one per cent paid to the treasurer of the school board, $400.

The city marshal's office paid last year over $2,000. Under the second class charter the office is abolished, and the police chief's salary could be placed at $1,000, saving at least $1,000. But this cannot be done for four years, as the present marshal will hold office for that length of time.

The increase in city court revenues will amount to $2000. All magistrates, under cities of the second class, hold persons charged with misdemeanors over to the police court, which widens its jurisdictions and increases the revenue.

The office of city prosecutor is abolished by the second class charter, and the duties may be imposed on the city solicitor; the name of the prosecuting attorney's office is changed to city attorney. The duties of both offices may be imposed on one without increase in salary. This, however, could not obtain in Paducah just now, nor for four years, as both a prosecuting attorney and a city attorney have been elected under the third charter and must serve their terms. Under the second class charter, however, at least a thousand dollars could be saved, as the office of prosecuting attorney pays over $2,000 a year, and requires but a few hours of time each day. Under the second class charter it will pay better, as the present incumbent, Attorney Jesse Gilbert, will continue to get 30 per cent of the fines and costs, and as the revenues will increase, so will his fees.

Under the second class the number of aldermen may be from four to eight, the number to be fixed by ordinance. If, eight, they get $6 a month each, a total of $576 a year.

The office of auditor is created, and his salary at $1,500 would be an additional expense. The four police and fire commissioners would each receive about $100 a year, or $400. Hence it is estimated from the above that the total saving under the second class charter would be about $12,000 a year, with no increase except the salaries of aldermen, auditor and police and fire commissioners. The biggest saving would be in the amount of money devoted to school purposes. The levy has been for the past five years 50 cents on the $100 for the first four, and 45 for the present. Under a 35 cent levy, which is all the second class charter allows, the levy would have been 15 cents on the $100 less for four years, and 10 cents the other.

The principal thing overlooked in the above estimate, however, is that the money proposed to be saved by abolition of certain offices could not for one to four years be saved, as the offices cannot be abolished, and the only objection heard to the proposed change of class is that the cost would now be so great that the city could well afford to wait until matters can be straightened out, and the city can enjoy some of the advantages of a second-class charter, without also having to bear the disadvantages under the old.

One great advantage in the second class is that it gives the city a right to have sanitary sewers constructed through any street or alley as the streets are—at the expense of the property owners, at a maximum cost of $1 per foot. Under the third class charter not less than an entire district can be sewered.

Another advantage under the second class charter is in building new streets, and reconstructing old ones, at the cost of the property owners, through street improvement bonds, to be paid on long time at a low rate of interest. Under the third class charter this is done out of the public treasury.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Rev. W. H. Pinkerton, the Christian church minister, will deliver a talk to the men of the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow afternoon. His subject has not yet been selected.

Rev. Geo. W. Briggs will talk to the boys this Sunday, and the two next Sundays. Rev. Briggs has prepared a series of talks to the boys and the attendance has been unusually large since he began. A large attendance is expected tomorrow.

After the men's service a social hour will be held as an experiment. Last Sunday after the men's meeting the young men met and considered the above plan, and thought it a good idea to start a social hour, and a tea after the afternoon services. The arrangements have been made for the holding of these sessions the remainder of the year, and if they are successful will be continued after the year has passed.

NO MATINEE.

On account of a washout on the railroad this morning the Shadows of Sin Company failed to get in time for a matinee this afternoon. The performance will be given tonight, however, all right.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Pace, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Muscoe Burnett, of West Broadway for the past week, left yesterday at noon for their home in Louisville.

THE WEATHER.

Fair weather and colder tonight with fair Sunday.

The Sun has removed to the old News stand, 115 South Third street.

WEEK'S NEWS IN THE BUSINESS WORLD.

Clearings the past week were $595,019.

Business with the banks has been very active with money in good demand, and currency being shipped in from the money centers. The tobacco season opened up lively for a few days, and set things going lively. Christmas trade is starting off very satisfactorily, and the indications for the biggest year in the local trade is very fine.

The bad weather today has hurt business very much, and trade has been extremely dull.

There has been no change of consequence in the general wholesale business this week.

The wholesale grocers report the trade about the same and the commission merchants also report a dull trade. This seems to be the dull season with the feed men and little active business is reported by them.

The whiskey dealers report large orders and good sales in the south and west and an increasing business.

Retail trade, is on a boom as the holiday buyers are doing an unusually large advance amount of buying.

The saddle and harness business is picking up with bright prospects for an early season.

The hardware dealers report a steady business with a light advance in holiday trade.

There is a great deal of new tobacco being delivered to the local warehouses and this week the dealers received something like 100 hogshhead of leaf.

There will be no market however until the receipts are large enough to justify the demand.

The midwinter busy railroad season has begun and a large and increasing local business is reported by the I. C. The trains are unusually heavy and the yard force is reinforced to handle the business.

A MYSTERY.

Milwaukee's Chief of Police Writes
Relative to a Murder.

Railroad Officer Supposed to Have Been Killed—Police Can't Locate the Case.

Marshal Crow this morning received a telegram from Chief of Police John T. Jansen of Milwaukee, from whom he received a telegram a few days ago, asking information about a railroad policeman found dead on the railroad track, and supposed to have been knocked in the head with a coupling pin and left there. He states that he will get the man, supposedly the one who committed the murder, but Marshal Crow can learn nothing of the case, which is supposed to have occurred about two years ago.

SMALL BLAZE.

FIRE DEPARTMENT MADE A COLD RUN THIS MORNING.

The fire departments were called to the residence of Mr. Joe Flash, corner of Fourth and Madison streets, this morning about 7 o'clock, to extinguish a small blaze in the kitchen roof of the house. The blaze originated from a defective flue, and was speedily extinguished by the firemen. No damage was done other than the burning of a few shingles.

UP TO DATE.

IN CIRCUIT COURT.

The Arenz Case Still on Trial at Adjournment.

There Was Nothing of Unusual Interest in Any of the Courts Today.

The Gilbert-Arenz disorderly house case was still being tried at the close of today's session of circuit court, and was continued over until Monday morning.

The case was taken up yesterday, and at noon today was only half finished. The commonwealth has finished its side of the case, and the defense will begin testimony Monday morning. It is estimated that the evidence will all be concluded by noon Monday, and the argument will then begin.

The time of the grand jury was extended to the eighteenth day.

In the case of Pat Halloran against W. G. Thompson, a transfer of bid was made. A judgment for $168.38 was filed in the case of the Guarantee Company of North America against R. and R. G. Geagen.

HARD FALL.

CHAIN GANG OVERSEER WOODS
MEETS WITH A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Chain Gang Overseer Woods, who rooms over Terrell's stable, met with a painful accident last evening early. He was called to the telephone, and at the head of the steps his heel caught and precipitated him headlong to the bottom. He fell on his face, and received painful injuries, being unconscious for quite awhile. Dr. Robertson attended him, and he is not seriously hurt.

INQUIRY COURT HAS REPORTED

It Finds Cause For Censure in the Schley Case.

The Findings Submitted Late Yesterday Afternoon at Washington—Some of the Contents.

VERDICT NOT ENTIRELY UNEXPECTED

Washington, Dec. 14.—The report and verdict of the Schley court of inquiry was handed to the secretary of the navy late yesterday afternoon. The finding had only shortly before been signed by the judge advocate general, Judge Lemly. Soon after the report reached the secretary it was given out to the public. This action was expected, and all day the report of its publication was anxiously looked for. There was an idea, however, as it was Friday and the 18th publicity might be withheld, but the idea was soon exploded.

The findings of the court are about three thousand words long. They are accompanied by a brief of the testimony of about eighty thousand words, giving the important evidence of each witness. This brief is of the utmost importance, because it presents the facts upon which the findings were drafted. There are ten specifications in the precept, and the court has given its opinion upon each. No recommendations contemplating further proceedings are made. Such a recommendation would be most embarrassing to the department which has no thought or desire to court martial Rear Admiral Schley or any other officer.

Admiral Schley, according to a majority of the court was found guilty of eleven of the charges in the precept.

Admiral Dewey dissents from the majority report. He finds for Schley. Dewey in his movements made all reasonable dispatch considering the coal supply, that the blockades at Santiago and Cienfuegos were effective, and he also says that Schley was the senior officer of the "Flying Squadron," at the battle of Santiago, and deserves all the credit for that glorious victory.

The majority opinion says Schley disregarded his orders, neglected his duty, was vacillatory and dilatory and lacked enterprise. He is called courageous at one point and then the report says he turned the Brooklyn because she was in dangerous proximity to the Spanish ships.

The first specification—the conduct of Rear Admiral Schley in connection with the events of the Santiago campaign—is so broad that it practically covers the entire campaign. Under it the court, has discussed, including the bombardment of the Colon and the battle of Santiago, and it absolves him from all charges of personal cowardice.

The second specification is in relation to the circumstances attending, the reasons controlling and the propriety of the movements of the flying squadron off Cienfuegos in May, 1898.

The court discusses in connection with this specification Rear Admiral Schley's assertion that he and some officers of his flagship, the Brooklyn, heard the boom of guns, fired with the regularity of a salute, indicating the arrival of the Spanish fleet in Cienfuegos; the receipt by Rear Admiral Schley of the orders sent by Rear Admiral Sampson by the Dupont and the Iowa that he should proceed to Santiago, if satisfied that the Spanish fleet was not in the harbor of Cienfuegos, and the orders, sent by the Iowa, directing him to proceed with all dispatch, but cautiously, to Santiago; the failure of the commander of the flying squadron to communicate with the shore, except by the steamer Adula, which did not come out of the harbor until the arrival of the Marblehead; the neglect of Captain B. H. McCalla, commanding the Marblehead to communicate to Rear Admiral Schley the secret code of signals he had arranged with the insurgents, and finally the display of Ardis signals after the squadron started for Santiago, in violation of the instructions of Rear Admiral Sampson that the squadron should leave Cienfuegos without letting the enemy know of his departure.

The court thinks Rear Admiral Schley should have taken measures to establish whether the Spanish ships were in the harbor before the arrival of the Marblehead.

The voyage from Cienfuegos to Santiago is next discussed. The judge advocate general holds that Rear Admiral Schley was not justified in proceeding so slowly to Santiago. This is a point to which the court does not attach special importance, because Rear Admiral Schley's orders directed him to proceed cautiously and, besides, he had heavy weather.

There is, however, a very decided expression of opinion upon the next three precepts, which all have bearing upon one event. The first relates to the circumstances attending the arrival of the flying squadron off Santiago, the reasons for its retrograde turn westward and departure from off Santiago; the second to the disobedience of Rear Admiral Schley of the orders directing him to proceed to Santiago and not let the Spanish fleet leave without a decisive action, and the third to the condition of the coal supply of the flying squadron, its coaling facilities, the necessity, if any, or advisability of the return of the squadron to Key West for coal and the accuracy and propriety of the official reports made by Rear Admiral Schley, with respect to this matter.

Rear Admiral Schley admitted that if he had known the Spanish fleet was in Santiago harbor it would have been possible for his squadron to have blockaded Santiago for a few days, beginning with May 26, the day of his arrival twenty miles south of the port, and still have had coal enough to have reached Key West. Rear Admiral Schley gave four different reasons for the retrograde movement, the only one he placed in his dispatch to the department announcing his return to Key West being lack of coal.

A FEW REASONS

WHICH ARE RAPIDLY MAKING A NEW CATARRH CURE FAMOUS.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, the new catarrh cure, has the following advantages over other catarrh remedies:

First: These tablets contain no cocaine, morphine or any other injurious drug and are as safe and beneficial for children as for adults; this is an important point when it is recalled that many catarrh remedies do contain these very objectionable ingredients.

Next: Being in tablet form this remedy does not deteriorate with age, or an exposure to the air, as liquid preparations invariably do.

Next: The tablet form not only preserves the medicinal properties, but is so far more convenient to carry and to use at any time that it is only a question of time when the tablet will entirely supersede liquid medicines, as it has already done in the medical department of the United States army.

Next: No secret is made of the composition of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets; they contain the active principles of Eucalyptus bark, red gum, blood root and Hydrastis, all harmless antiseptics which, however, are death to catarrhal germs wherever found, because they eliminate them from the blood.

Next: You cannot cure catarrh by local applications to the nose or throat, because these are simply local symptoms, and such treatment cannot possibly reach the real seat of the catarrhal disease, which is in the blood; for this reason inhalers, douches, sprays and powders never really cure catarrh, but simply give temporary relief, which a dose of plain salt and water will do just as well.

Catarrh must be driven out of the system, out of the blood, by an internal remedy because an internal remedy is the only kind which can be assimilated into the blood.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets do this better than the old form of treatment, because they contain every safe specific known to modern science in the antiseptic form of the disease.

Next: The use of inhalers and spraying apparatuses, besides being ineffective and disappointing, is expensive, while a complete treatment of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets can be had at any drug store in the United States and Canada for 50 cents.

MISS JANE, SIR CUPID AND I.

(A collaborative poem by Edith M. Thomas and Frank R. Stockton.)

Miss Jane, Sir Cupid and I—
Nay, rather she walked by herself,
And never would answer me why.

The more I besought her, still farther
And farther she fitted ahead,
Laughing and scattering roses—
Roses, the white and the red.

At last she gave me her reason;
Surely I "ought to have known"—
"Sir Cupid"—and—"There are too many."

She'd walk with me, if alone

So, lost in the maze of the roses,
Forever she fitted before;
And I said with a sigh to Sir Cupid:
"I'll follow the truant no more!"

The next time I drew near the roses,
I listened; I heard a faint stir,
And when I looked into the garden
The rascal was walking with her!

Then softly I crept in and caught her;
She blushed but would not be free.
By keeping Sir Cupid between us
There was room in those alleys for three.

SOCIETY AND CHARITY.

There has not been a great deal of gaiety this week, and the prospect for the coming week is for even less. As the Christmas time draws nearer, society has had to pause in her round of pleasure, and go to work in earnest; but afterwards, if Dame Rumor is to be believed on, there will be enough play to last some time. Just now Christmas work and Christmas shopping are the all-absorbing themes, and Christmas suggestions are like germs in the December air. But in the round of busy shopping it is safe to assert that the poor will not be forgotten. Society is proverbially generous to the "other half," and many large deeds of beautiful charity are done by the so-called "butterflies" and "frivolous ones" of the world. More than often the deeds are of the kind that the right and left hand are unaware of, for "My Lady Bountiful" does not like to parade her bounty. It is only by accident we come across them, often where it is too late to render justice when we have misjudged. There are going to be some wondrous enlightenments on that "Christmas morning when the King comes to His own."

Recently a beautiful way of keeping Christmas came to light. It is told of a Memphis society girl that instead of giving gifts to her wealthy friends, and so planting the seeds of presents yet to come, she puts her simple allowance of Christmas money into a splendid dinner for hungry little waifs. "She doesn't merely fill them with food; she serves them herself in her own home, from her silver, and cut glass, on the same snowy linen she would use for a luncheon for her smart friends. She gives them the daintiest and best of dinners, and afterward plays games with them till, tired and happy, they start home, bearing proudly a "Christmas gift." More than all, she sees beforehand that each of her little guests is provided with holiday garments. In all respects she treats them in such a way as to take away the barbed edge of condescension that charity so often carries, and makes of Christmas what it should be, a child's festival celebrating the birth of the Christ child.

Could anything be more truly generous than this "art of giving?" "Cold charity" is robbed of its horror by deeds like this. It is not possible for all of society to entertain after this fashion, but there are many cases right at our door that we can aid, and if we do not want to be the dispenser of our own gifts, there are plenty of almoners on every hand. The Sun Christmas tree, the Civic Federation benevolent department, the Home of the Friendless and the Rescue Mission tree will all welcome any contribution.

A CHARMING WEDDING.

Beautiful in detail and ensemble was the wedding of Miss May Terrell and Mr. Leslie B. Samuels of Bardstown, Ky., at Grace Episcopal church on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Although having all the features of an elaborate evening ceremony, there was yet a marked simplicity and quietness in evidence that made it especially attractive.

The altar was effectively banked with palms and ferns, the graceful Southern smilax being a charming feature of the decorations. Long before the appointed hour the church was taxed to its utmost capacity with the friends of one of the most universally beloved of Paducah's charming society girls, and there was a tenseness of expectancy visible when the organ under the skilled touch of Miss Jessie Nash gave its welcoming prelude. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. [The ushers came first, Mr. C. W. Thompson and Mr. Abram Well leading; then came Mr. Clint Terrell of Cairo and Mr. William Bradshaw, Jr. Miss Hattie Terrell and Miss Mary Boswell were first bridesmaids, followed by Judge F. E. Daugherty of Bardstown and Mr. Roy Culley; then Miss Josephine Samuels of Bardstown and Miss Elizabeth Sinnott, with Dr. T. H. Wells of Bardstown and Mr. Wallace Well follow. The bride entered with her sister, Miss Minnie Terrell, the maid of honor. At the altar they were met by the groom and his best man, H. E. H. Brown of Bardstown. A beautiful picture was formed as troth was pledged, and the ceremony impressively said by the Rev. B. E. Reed, rector of the church. Mr. Clint Terrell of Cairo, a cousin of the bride, gave her away. Rubenstein's Melody was sympathetically played during the ceremony, and the triumphant strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march as they left the church.

The bride wore an exquisite gown of embroidered chiffon over silk, with the wedding veil thrown back, and carried bride roses and lilies of the valley. The groom's gift a beautiful diamond and pearl pendant was her only ornament. Always beautiful, she looked more than ever lovely and radiant, and satisfied even the most critical.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore artistic gowns of white India silk, and looked very charming. It was essentially a "white wedding," the only touch of color being the American Beauty roses carried by the bridesmaids, which were especially appropriate to the occasion. The maid of honor carried bride roses.

Among the out-of-town guests present at the wedding were Mrs. O. D. Samuels and Mrs. A. D. Carrothers, mother and sister of the groom, and Judge John Kelly, all of Bardstown. Only the immediate bridal party were entertained at the bride's home after the wedding, which had been very charmingly decorated for the larger reception which was to have been held from 9 until 11, but had been called in. The number and elegance of the gifts received bore eloquent testimony to the popularity of the bride and groom in their respective homes. Mr. and Mrs. Samuels left at midnight for a trip east.

They will reside at Bardstown, which is the native home of the groom, and where he occupies a prominent position in the business and social life of the aristocratic old place.

Some out-of-town weddings.

Mr. Francis Robinson Clarke of Memphis, formerly of this city, was married on Wednesday to Miss Esther Marie Reinhardt of Savannah, Ga. It was an evening wedding, and took place in St. John's church, Savannah, and was a very swell affair. Mrs. Irvin S. Cobb and Miss Manie Cobb of this city, who are visiting in Savannah, were among the guests at the wedding.

Miss Reinhardt is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace George Reinhardt, and is a very attractive and popular.

Mr. Latham is a member of the big banking firm of Latham and Co., New York, and was formerly of Hopkinsville, having built the Latham hotel there. He is well and favorably known here.

Miss Gaylord is the daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. Thomas G. Gaylord of Louisville, and is quite a prominent society girl. Her picture was in Munsey some time since taken as "Queen Louise of Prussia," and her resemblance to that famous beauty was very striking.

A brilliant social event in Fulton was the wedding of Miss Daisy Blythe and Mr. Henry Knight in that city on Wednesday evening. THE CHARITY BALL.

An event of especial interest of the week was the charity ball on Thursday evening at The Kentucky, under the auspices of the Civic Federation of Women's Clubs.

It was only planned last week and was really the response to an "emergency call," and was remarkably successful when all things are considered. The devoted women who had the affair in charge have labored untiringly that some of the calls for help might be met as quickly as possible. The Kentucky presented a most attractive scene on the occasion. The stage was used for dancing and was beautifully arranged. It presented the appearance of a spacious ball room, and was effectively decorated with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums. Quite a number took part in the dancing, and the on-lookers occupied the auditorium and boxes. The attendance was large, and the affair was in every way a credit to the noble ladies of the Civic Federation, whose only reward is the realization that they have helped to feed the hungry and clothe the poor in this bitter weather.

COTILLION CLUB DANCE.

A very delightful dance was given by the Cotillion club at the Palmer house on Tuesday evening in honor of the Terrell-Samuels wedding party and out-of-town guests. The attendance was quite large and the occasion most enjoyable. Those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames Thomas C. Leech, Harris Rankin, Albert Foster, Frank Rieke, Charles Kiger, Victor Voris, W. B. McPherson, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Boyd; Miss Josephine Samuels, of Bardstown; Miss Susan Humble, of Lebanon; Misses Martha Davis, Laura Sanders, Lillian Rudy, Minnie Terrell, Hattie Terrell, Mary Boswell, Anne Boswell, Elizabeth Sinnott, Jane Rivers, Myra DuBois, Suzanne Jorgenson, Mary Corbett, Mabel Rieke, Gerald Sanders, Anne Reed, Annie May Yeiser, Caroline Sowell; Judge F. E. Daugherty, of Bardstown; Hon. Eli H. Brown, of Bardstown; Dr. T. H. Wells, of Bardstown; Mr. Clint Terrell, of Cairo; Messrs. DELPHIC CLUB.

The Delphic club meeting on Tuesday morning with Mrs. Louis M. Rieke was one of the most interesting of the season. The program was especially full and the papers exceedingly delightful. The seventeenth century of German literature, of which period "religious poetry is the strong point" was the central theme of discussion. Miss Martha Davis gave a very interesting account of "Religious Poetry and Music in the Seventeenth Century, and of Paul Gerhardt—His Poems and Hymns." Mrs. J. C. Flournoy dealt very charmingly with "Sperner and Pietism." "Count Zinzendorf. The Moravian Brotherhood—Joachim Neander" was the subject of Mrs. Cook Husbands' able paper. Mrs. George Flournoy told very entertainingly of "J. S. Bach's Passion Oratorios." An account of "Handel's Opera and Oratorios" was delightfully given by Mrs. Frank Parham. The next meeting of the club will be on January 7, with Mrs. James A. Rudy, who will be the hostess for the month.

MISS M'GREW AND MR. EDWARDS MARRIED.

Miss Georgia McGrew the popular artist, and Mr. Gus Edwards, of the Paducah Gas company, were quietly married in Memphis at the Peabody hotel at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. K. Penrod of Ennis, Texas, who came from Texas for the purpose and accompanied them down to Memphis. It was not a runaway match, unless from their friends, and to have a quiet wedding. The wedding had been anticipated for some time, but nothing definite as to it could be learned even after Mr. Penrod's arrival from Texas ostensibly to perform the ceremony, and they succeeded in surprising their friends at last by marrying in Memphis.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARDS RETURNED TO PADUCAH ON THURSDAY AND HAVE BEEN RECEIVING THE CONGRATULATIONS OF THEIR MANY FRIENDS.

Paying the Lecturer.

Mr. Westcott, the author of "David Harnum," possessed a barytone voice which, had he chosen to cultivate it, might have brought him greater reputation than he obtained through his writings. In the Literary Era Miss Helen Casdee tells an amusing story of one of Mr. Westcott's musical experiences. He was invited to sing at a concert in one of the smaller towns of western New York. On this perfunctory jaunt he was saved from such a hotel as that which insulted John Lennon, by the hospitality of the man who organized the concert, a person of much local importance. The affair passed off satisfactorily, with the help of the visitor's rare voice. As Mr. Westcott was about to retire, his host came timidly to his room, bearing two long paper boxes. "I leave the house so early in the morning to go to my factory," he explained, "that I am afraid I may not see you, but I want to give you something for your singing tonight. Now, here's two pair of the very best whalebone corsets that our factory turns out, and I want you to take them home with you." When Mr. Westcott found that he could not even protest effectually, his sense of humor came to his relief, and he stalked home the next day with two pairs of corsets in exchange for his songs.—Youth's Companion.

Johnny as Golf.

Golf is a game that is played with a lot of sticks, a little round ball, and a caddy. The caddy is a boy with slim legs, and poor but honest parents. You scrape up a small mound of sand and put the ball on top of it. Then you raise the stick over your shoulder, shout "Fore!" in a loud tone of voice, and hit the ball with all your might. The great aim is to knock the ball into a hole which is in the distance. If you lose the ball you have to get another. There was a hotel clerk who married a rich young woman, and he did not have to be a clerk any more, so he joined a golf club and wore real diamonds and the finest clothes that money could procure. When he went out to play his first game of golf he looked with proud disdain at the little ball. Then he raised his club aloft and gazed haughtily about him, but instead of saying "Fore!" he yelled "Front!" and for some reason or other he never got into real good society after that.—JOHNNY.

IN THE THEATRICAL WORLD

Those who missed the W. H. West's minstrel at The Kentucky last night were indeed unfortunate. Never was there a better minstrel performance witnessed in Paducah, and never was there rendered such a delightful high class and artistic musical program. The audience was small, but was appreciative, and the troupe, despite the discouraging attendance, gave a complete performance, and good naturedly responded to repeated encores, really giving an unusually long performance.

Billy Van is about the drollest, and most original black comedian on the stage, and kept the crowd in a continual uproar. There is no one that can touch him, and hereafter when his name appears on the program of any show coming to Paducah, it will be sufficient to draw a crowded house. Among the star features was the singing of "The Game of Eyes" by Mr. George Jones, a baritone unsurpassed in minstrelsy. "Go Way Back and Sit Down," which has been sung here many times this season, was sung in an inimitable manner by Mr. John H. King, and the audience was so pleased he had to add several extra verses. The Rio Brothers, in acrobatic feats, gave an exhibition never beaten for feats of strength and agility, and the musical entertainment of Messrs. Carr, McDonald and Parsley introduced new and pleasing features.

The last of the program was given to the Zeb and Zarrow Trio, in their trick bicycle riding. They can ride anything from a pair of pneumatic wheels attached to the feet, to a grind stone.

"The best I ever saw" is what many old theater goers said at the conclusion of the performance. Manager English should give West a return date.

The musical program was as follows:

Interlocutor—Frederick McDonald. Comedians—Billy Van, John H. King, Frank Hammond and N. S. Carr.

Vocalists—Mannet Romain, Clement Stewart, George Jones, Harry Sylvester, Wilson N. Miller, Charles Rosedale, George E. Collins, musical director.

Part I—First Edition.

Introductory overture, arranged by Geo. E. Collins.

"Ain't Dat a Shame?"—Frank Hammond.

"Today"—Mannet Stewart.

"Girls, Girls"—N. S. Carr.

Part II—Second Edition.

Introduction of Billy Van and John H. King.

"The Game of Eyes"—George Jones.

"Go Way Back and Sit Down"—John H. King.

"When the Boys Go Marching By"—Mannet Romain.

Original Parodies—Billy Van.

"Execution"—By the West Quintette.

Monday night the Murray Comedy Co. will make its bow to the theatre lovers of Paducah at The Kentucky, presenting "Nature's Nobleman." There is a great deal of local interest manifested in the appearance here of this company, for the reason that it was originally born in the summer by Messrs. C. J. Lamb and J. Rus Smith, who made many friends during their brief stay. Among the company's many artists are five of Paducah's old favorites, Messrs. Howard Tremaine, Franklyn Whitman, Elba Wright, Fred Ellsworth and Warren Catlen, who played all summer at the park in W. C. Malone's stock company. These gentlemen have many warm friends here and it is almost a home coming to them to get back to Paducah. Advance Manager Lamb has received a good many letters during his visit here this week asking him to remember "the boys" kindly to all their old friends, and to say that they are looking forward to their visit with more than pleasure, and from all indications they will certainly receive an ovation.

The "Shadows of Sin" company, that is playing to one of the best matinees of the season at The Kentucky this afternoon, will repeat the performance tonight, and is one of the cleanest, brightest and best melodramas of the season. The company numbers seventeen artists, and deserves special mention, and all that love the sensational when presented in a first class manner should not fail to see "Shadows of Sin" tonight. The prices of admission are popular and the best orchestra seats only 75 cents.

Neva Harrison has been re-engaged to play the part of Fan-Fan in "Two Little Vagrants," which is the attraction of The Kentucky on Christmas day matinee and night. Nearly all the old favorites of former seasons have been retained. Most prominent among the newly engaged members are Ray Scott for Claude, and Lillian Emery for Helene.

Mr. Howard Kyle, in "Nathan Hale," which will be presented at The Kentucky Saturday afternoon and night Dec. 28, has made a splendid impression throughout the south. The Augusta, Ga., Chronicle, speaks of the play editorially with high praise.

It is said of "Way Down East," the famous New York success, that will be seen at The Kentucky on New Year's eve, that it possesses more heart and more naturalness in its portrayal of New England rustic simplicity than any play of the kind ever written. It is the story of the woman who has been wronged and who is made to suffer, but who finally attains happiness and peace.

Negotiations are still pending with "Florodora" company regarding their appearance here January 21st. The management of the big popular musical organization thinks that in order to bring this company here, which numbers over eighty people, and travels in a special train, that he should have a big stiff guarantee and should charge two dollars for the best seats, the same as they get in Louisville, St. Louis, Memphis and Nashville, and Manager English can't see it that way. It is hoped that contracts will formally be closed and that "Florodora" will be seen here, but the matter is still indefinite.

Very little phosphate mining is now being done in Canada; in fact the industry has been practically dead for some years, owing to the low prices paid for the mineral because of the competition of the cheap mined phosphates from the southern states and other sources. The principal deposit in Canada is near Buckingham, in the province of Quebec. This was the headquarters of the Canadian phosphate industry, but at the works there Tennessee phosphate of high grade is now being used in the manufacture of phosphorus.—Montreal Herald and Star.

Where He Slept. It was a discouraging answer that was made to the dotting parents of a country boy who had gone to New York under the patronage of a prosperous grocer. After he had been away for a fortnight the mother wrote to the boy's employer, saying that her son was "no hand to write letters," and she was anxious to know how he was getting on. "And do tell me where he sleeps nights," she pleaded earnestly at the end of the letter. To this the grocer made answer within a few days: "Your son sleeps in the store in the daytime. I don't know where he sleeps nights."

Swiss People Wax Fat on Tourists. Life is pleasant in central Switzerland, where all the countries of civilization go to seek rest and health. The whole of this country is a pleasure resort, a reserve set apart as a playground by common consent, much as Canada has created the National Park at Banff, or the United States the Yellowstone. No other nation must trespass on Switzerland, or take bites out of her; she belongs to all, and her people have accepted the role of amusement caterers with a seriousness beyond all praise. The children at school have respect for the foreigner dinned into them persistently; he is the industry of the country, and must be cultivated.

SAVED THE LIFE OF A PIG.

The Owner Married the Man Who Stole the Animal.

The office of Magistrate Conohan, in Wilkesbarre, Pa., was the scene of a novel wedding today, the participants in which were Miss Mathilda Parkerson, aged 53, and Hiram Johnson, aged 55. Miss Parkerson and Johnson claimed the ownership of a little pig. Miss Parkerson said it was her pig and Hiram took an oath that the pig was his property. After squabbling for ten days the matter was brought before Justice Conohan, who promised to settle the dispute. The pig was brought to the squire's office and the interested parties were on hand. Miss Parkerson swore the pig was hers. Then Johnson was sworn. He called the pig by name and the little one followed him all over the room. He had trained the pig and for half an hour he amused the squire and all the witnesses. The alderman finally rendered the following verdict: That the pig should be killed and roasted and divided equally between Miss Parkerson and Hiram Johnson. Both protested. They did not want to see the pig killed. Miss Parkerson said she would save the pig if she had to die for it. The squire suggested that they get married—it would save the pig and they would both own it. Hiram said he would not propose to Miss Parkerson as he was ashamed. After some hesitation Mathilda finally asked Hiram if he would become her husband. The justice remembered that he had a wedding ring in the safe that had been left there for security. The groom bought it for $2.50. The couple then got a marriage license and the alderman made them man and wife, thus saving the life of the pig. After the alderman had kissed the pair and wished them a prosperous life they got into the farm wagon, the pig between them, and drove home.—Philadelphia Record.

Some General Ideas in Pickling. Our grandmothers had nothing for making their pickles in but brass or copper. If one has to use such kettles the utmost cleanliness should be observed or the action on such metals creates a poison. They ought to be polished until they can be used as a mirror. But never use brass, tin or copper unless necessary. If you have to purchase get porcelain or granite ware. These wares are easy to clean and absolutely safe. Use the best cider or wine vinegar. Never boil it over seven minutes or it loses its strength. Put pickles in glass or stone jars and see that the jars are perfectly clean. See that pickles are always well covered with the vinegar, or they will soften and become covered with a whitish substance. Watch your pickles and if they show symptoms of not keeping, pour away the vinegar and cover them with fresh vinegar and spices brought to the boil. The ground spices up in small muslin bags. Always put a bit or two of horseradish into the top of the pickles of each jar; it helps to keep away the starchy effect. Seal pickles as carefully as fruit, and when a few have been used close the jar as tightly again.

TOO WELL ACQUAINTED.

Given an Inferior Reception Because "You'll Not Care."

"I find being too intimate with people rather a disadvantage than otherwise," remarked a popular woman recently to the Chicago News. "If you are, there is always apt to come a time when you are no longer a person grata, but merely a friend that can be treated anyhow—just like one of the family—and yet be relied upon never to take offense. When your hostess begins to seat herself in the most comfortable chair, leaving you to take what you can get, and puts you in the small bedroom when you visit her, because she knows 'you will not care,' you may know that the point I have spoken of has been reached. At their nicest and most exclusive dinners, too, you are generally left out. 'Dear Katie,' they will say, 'knows how it is herself certain people must be asked, there are so many 'paybacks' to be invited.' Of course you have to say you quite understand it, but you are not particularly pleased to be written to at the eleventh hour by your dear Emily, saying, 'What a comfort to have a true friend! I know you will come over this evening and fill Mrs. Lofty's place, who has just given up!' Or to be asked next week 'because you know them so well' to 'help leave the jump' of a distinctly trump dinner party. 'I am having old Mr. and Mrs. Winter from the country,' writes dear Emily, 'and poor Miss Wither, who goes out so little, and a few others like that. I know you will not mind coming to enliven things up for them. There are not many I could ask such a favor of (I should think not! I ejaculate mentally), but I feel that I never need stand upon ceremony with my dear Katie.' This she certainly never does, but I am beginning to wish she would!"

"CHARACTER" PIPES.

Most Elaborate Meerschaum in This Country Now Being Colored.

Probably the most elaborate meerschaum pipe in this country is now in process of coloring by a New York merchant, who bought it for $1,800. The pipe is known as a "character" pipe to the trade; it is a wonderfully carved reproduction of the painting "St. John at His Bath." It represents six maidens grouped around a fountain, and either St. John is concealed behind the fountain, or in it; he is not in sight, at any rate. The figures are chiseled from a solid piece of meerschaum, which was imported from Turkey. The labor expended upon it extended over a period of two years, and the amber mouthpiece alone cost $500. Among retail dealers it is said that the demand for meerschaum pipes and holders has greatly decreased in the last few years. French brier has supplanted it in popularity. Manufacturers declare, however, that they have all they can do to fill their orders and that the quality and the workmanship of the goods turned out by them are 50 per cent better than formerly. They account for the apparent falling off in the demand to the increased care a man takes of a good meerschaum. "People here are being educated," said one manufacturer. "They understand that a good pipe can not be ill-treated, and they are learning to take proper care of them. One pipe nowadays will last a man three times the time the same pipe would a few years ago."—New York Evening Post.

A Cinderella of the Foothills.

By E. L. Huston.

(Copyright, 1921, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The cotillion to be given at the barracks had awakened up the little garrison town as had nothing else that season. In the first place, the barracks affairs were always successful; there were always plenty of dancing men to go around, and the floor of the drill shed was the best for dancing in the city. And there was so little in the way of excitement in those far western towns that knew nothing of parks and lakes and little jaunts into the country. There were irrigating ditches instead of lakes and a few irrigation-raised trees instead of parks, and no country, but wide stretches of alkali dust and sage brush and cacti. It was a "howling wilderness," the eastern-raised brides wrote home in dismay, and only in the garrison towns was life worth living.

But the jolly little Arab families, who lived their brief season in "officers' row," quite ready to pack and they marching orders at a moment's notice, gave the disconsolate brides their philosophy and brightened the passing hour as best they could.

So the cotillion was announced by the hospitable military folk, and delightful was the excitement in consequence. But in affairs of society and state, be the matter great or small, creep the undercurrents of human interests, and in the atmosphere of pleasurable excitement floated the inevitable, conflicting incense of keen anticipation and misanthropic vapor of bitterness and envy. For at the cotillion the new social lion, Roger Huntleigh, the eastern speculator, was expected to be present, and debutantes and dowagers regarded him with special and most favorable interest.

Then, the cotillion was to be given jointly by the Colonel's wife and the social leader of the little city, Mrs. Despard; and Miss Despard had in her "act" a bete noir—the daughter of a physician. And the doctor's daughter was not invited. Why? asked the little garrison town. Then it raised its eyebrows and smiled. Miss Despard was handsome in her Juanesque, commanding way. But the gentle daughter of hard-working Dr. Harvis had a winsome beauty all her own, and a soft and sweet graciousness that all the Despard jewels could not outshine.

"So the fair Despard left you out, my daughter. O my daughter!" laughed the doctor that night as he stamped into the house and nodded toward the window, where the garrison lights could be seen all flickering near the foothills.

"Cut dead, dad, dear!" smiled his daughter. "And I would have enjoyed it so!"

"See what it is to inherit your father's fatal beauty, my dear!" said the grizzled physician solemnly, pinching her rosy ear. "You see, even the dazzling Despard fears you when the new lion roars. And this is the night that Huntleigh is to be undone."

"You brazenly vain man!" replied Miss Harvis.

She bent low over the little kettle that was bubbling furiously over the alcohol flame, and something glittered in the light of the fire—something that trembled a moment on the dark eyelashes, then was swept hastily away as she turned smilingly to the doctor.

"Tea or toddy, dad? Get into your slippers and smoking jacket, and be comfy. I am starved."

She did not eat much, however, though she broke up some muffins and cakes on her plate and built forts with the crumbs. But her father seemed serenely indifferent to her lack of appetite, and enjoyed his supper with absolute content.

"Some more preserves, Harriet. I tell you, those silver Idaho prunes are all right. And I'll take another muffin, my dear. Saw Huntleigh in the Overland to-day. Fine fellow."

"Yes."

Miss Harvis hastily buttered a piece of muffin, then absently propped it in one corner of the crumb fortification. Then she prodded it with a toothpick.

"Cut dead, dad, dear."

"Says he expects to go east in a few weeks."

"Yes?"

Miss Harvis did not seem in a conversational mood. The doctor glanced at her from under his bushy eyebrows and reached for another muffin. His daughter was laboriously planting flag-sticks, made of toothpicks, around the crumb fort.

"Yes," assented the doctor briskly. "Have an idea he is thinking of marrying. Something he said led me to infer that he was. Lucky woman, whoever gets him. He's pretty clean cut, all told."

"Tea."

Miss Harvis was certainly not loquacious.

Dr. Harvis stared thoughtfully at the glowing logs in the fireplace a moment, then heekly asked for another cup of tea.

The tea was poured out in profound silence, and was sugared four times. The doctor did not take any sugar at all in his tea, but he made no protest, and swallowed the mixture heroically, only making a slight grimace as it went down.

"There—the gate clicked," he remarked presently.

"Oh, dad—someone after you. And I did want you home with us to-night. It seems so—"

Harriet had risen to her feet, with a look of dismay on her fair face.

A firm step sounded on the porch, and the knocker rat-a-tat-tat gently. The doctor paused with foot in a slipper, then smiled and settled himself in his favorite chair with the best of grace.

"Sincerely hope I'm not intruding," Miss Harriet. A man is such a lonely being in a hotel, and I thought you might take 'ty on me!"

His honest dark eyes were shining with wonderment and—undeniably—pleasure, as they rested on his strong face and six foot one of heavy manhood. Then she smiled.

"I hardly think your condition hopelessly pitiable!" she said, laughing a

"I was going, to see you."

little. "I thought you were going to the cotillion?"

Mr. Huntleigh drew back the curtains and glanced at the garrison lights. Then he walked over to her chair and, drawing an ottoman near, he sat down and gently drew her two hands into his.

"I was going—to see you," he said with grave earnestness. "Then I learned from the doctor that you were to be home. And—I came here. I think you know why. Will you give yourself to me, dear? I am lonely and I want you so."

The doctor came in after a little and suggested that he had nutmegs and lemons and the kettle was boiling, and if Harriet could think of something else he might fix up something.

And when his daughter kissed him with sudden and grave intensity and ran away to get the something needful, he turned to Huntleigh, who wrung both his hands hard and promised he would only take her east three months of the year.

Then the doctor's rugged face lighted up. And when Harriet came back, and was gathered promptly into Huntleigh's arms, the doctor glanced out at the garrison lights and with great care and solemnity—closed one eye.

TREAT A BOY WITH TACT.

The Average Lad Dislikes to Be Paraded in Public.

"Good mothers show every estimable quality but tact toward their sons," remarked a young man recently. "Unselfishness, devotion, kindness and sympathy are all given in full measure and running over, but the faculty which they take with them into society as a matter of course, which divides what should and should not be said, seems to be considered as superfluous in regard to their children. The kind mother is constantly, albeit all unintentionally, offending the susceptibilities of that hypersensitive creature, the half grown boy, by her personal allusions and remarks when in company. I remember how I used to dread going out with my mother just on that account. I never knew what she would say, and I fairly used to squirm in anticipation when I heard her mention my name. The dear creature was so proud of me and of my small achievements, and with the exaggeration of self which is so common with young people, I always felt that I was being dragged into prominence in the most ridiculous fashion when she talked of me. Another trait of a boy which mothers are apt to ignore through want of tact is an intense dislike to being quoted. It is all right if he relates an incident or criticizes a comrade himself, but to hear his remarks repeated vexes him excessively. Many a time have I seen a school friend flush to the roots of his hair with annoyance when his mother all unwittlingly alludes to something he has told her about the boys. A youth is a queer creature—rough and almost callous in some things, oversensitive and foolishly thin-skinned in others, and a mother with tact will understand his many contradictions and earn his gratitude and confidence by humoring them."

Phonographs are to be placed in the Vienna railway station, to call out the places at which the trains about to start will stop.

FROSTY WEATHER USHERED IN

The Predicted Cold Wave Came
With a Vengeance Last Night.

A Fall of Fifty Degrees in Temperature
—The Mercury Went to Eight Degrees.

SOME INCIDENTS OF THE CHANGE

The people of Paducah were somewhat astonished. This morning to find, upon arising, about four inches of snow on the ground, with the temperature 8 degrees above zero, the coldest December weather for several years.

Yesterday it rained almost all day, and last night, when most people retired, it was still raining. The predicted cold wave swooped down on the city sometime before daylight, and the rain changed to snow.

The street cars could not run until the snow ceased, and the track could be cleared, and many people, especially the merchants residing in the outskirts or suburbs, had to telephone for hacks in order to reach their places of business. Every hack in the city was pressed into service for several hours, and still many people preferred to remain at home.

Weather Observer Bornemann remarked this morning that the weather is almost unprecedented. His records show that last December, the coldest weather was on the 28th, when the mercury went down to only 22. This December it has already been 8, which it reached last night, a fall of fifty degrees, in round numbers, since yesterday afternoon. The highest yesterday was 60 degrees.

Last month, also, the weather was unusually cold. The average temperature was 47 degrees, five degrees colder than the average mean temperature for November a year ago. The snow fall was about four inches.

"It has looked to me for the past several months," remarked Observer Bornemann, "like we are going to have an unusually severe winter, and my belief is being confirmed right along."

Yesterday's rainfall was very heavy, and the city was flooded in many places. One reason of this was that the drain pipes can not carry off the water rapidly enough, even where they are not stopped up, and in many places they are clogged, and it is not found out until it rains, whole sections being flooded. Then it is difficult to get the pipes unstopped.

The fills in the southwestern part of the city prevent the water being carried off as it was formerly, and as a result many of the hollows fill up, and back water up into yards and cause much inconvenience for hours, or until it can be run off. This was the case yesterday.

A darkey employed at Glauber's, known as "Potato Bug Bill," fell into a gutter at Seventh and Trimble yesterday afternoon late, and came near being drowned before he could be pulled out. His feet were sucked into a sewer pipe, and he could not extricate himself.

Among those who feel the effects of such weather is the telephone company. This morning at 7 o'clock only two of the day operators showed up, and the company had to send out carriages and bring the others to work. Superintendent Joyner estimates the number of calls that will be answered today at 20,000. The girls were kept so busy this morning that the precipitation fairly dripped from their faces, many people transacting most of their business over the 'phone.

Superintendent Joyner anticipates many complaints, as a result, but the service, considering everything, has been exceptionally good. It is suggested that the public remember this, and not become impatient. Not long ago a lady who tried to get "Central" and failed, took an ax and broke up the 'phone.

The Paducah Water company was preparing to connect Worton's Addition yesterday when the rain came up and prevented. There have been few complaints thus far of bursted water pipes.

The street cars did not begin running until about noon today. The snow plow quickly cleared the tracks, and the appearance of the cars was very gratifying to the public.

For the first time in months sleighs were brought into service this morning. There was not enough snow last season to permit of sleighing, but the present snow promises sport for an indefinite period.

The smaller streams were frozen several inches deep this morning, and strong enough to bear skating. On the small ponds the first skating of the season is being enjoyed today and the small boys are out in force.

The Hiram Blow stove works, near the I. O. depot, was this morning shut down on account of the snow, which had drifted on the platforms and into the mill so badly that the workmen could not work.
